Your next career move should be strategic

Who you are

With at least ten years' experience as a firefighter, five of which will have been performing fire service instructor duties, you will be able to put your interpersonal skills, firefighting and fire prevention expertise to use in an international context. You have an Industrial Fire Fighting background and will be familiar with NFPA, OSHA and other international training standards and will be able to conduct presentations confidently and with good English skills. Not only will you be mentally and physically fit in accordance with fire service regulations and in possession of a SCBA certificate, but you will also be business fit, with an ability to work under pressure, use your self-initiative, have a disciplined and methodical work ethic and you will be open to work in different countries and cultures.

What you will be doing

- Develop training programs and/ or utilizing developed course materials based on the client's needs
- Perform instructional sessions worldwide -at the client's location or in cooperation with our training-center-alliance (TCA) facilities
- Manage basic resources, records and reports essential to the instructional process
- Assemble course materials necessary for instruction
- Conduct Training Needs Analysis (TNA)
- Assist in fire prevention consultancy projects

What we can we do for you

We will offer you a workplace which gives you space for personal and professional development, a flexible work schedule, relocation assistance to Germany, a fair compensation and benefits package and an enjoyable working environment, defined by tolerance, honesty and respect. Strategic Fire Solutions is an international company based in the heart of Europe.
